OVERVIEW: YOGYAKARTA & UGM

YOGYAKARTA

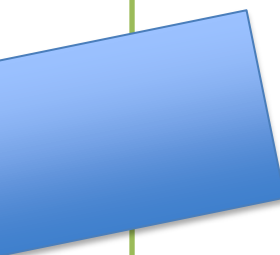

Welcome to Yogyakarta! One of the foremost cultural centers in Indonesia that offers a plethora of marvelous experiences to behold. It's home to a multitude of significant landmarks and invaluable archaeological sites. Many years in the past, this city held a significant amount of power and stimulated the creation of impressive architectural feats, such as the Borobudur and Prambanan temples between the 8th and 9th centuries. Subsequently, it had a significant impact on the formation of the dominant Mataram kingdom throughout the 16th and 17th centuries.

The contribution of Yogyakarta was crucial in the fight for the independence of Indonesia. From 1946 to 1948, Yogyakarta served as the capital of the Republic of Indonesia. Due to the major role in upholding the Republic of Indonesia, Yogyakarta was granted special autonomy status as a district, affording it the unique distinction of being the sole region in Indonesia led by a recognized monarchy with a sultan still in power. Jogja is recognized with the slogan "Jogja Istimewa", highlighting its distinctive qualities. Thus, Yogyakarta has become one of Indonesia's top tourist spots for its abundance of attractions waiting to be discovered.

UNIVERSITAS GADJAH MADA

Yogyakarta is also widely acknowledged as a centre of education in Indonesia, and is renowned for its thriving cultural scene. The city is home to a considerable number of academic establishments, with notable mention of Universitas Gadjah Mada. This preeminent university is the biggest and most prestigious higher education institution in the country. Universitas Gadjah Mada officially became a national university on December 19, 1949. The name "Gadjah Mada" carries great significance since it represents the dedication and remarkable achievements of Gadjah Mada, the Prime Minister of the Majapahit Empire that successfully unified the scattered Nusantara archipelago.

Established during the initial phase of independence, Universitas Gadjah Mada was designated as the preeminent hub for academic and cultural pursuits under the national higher education system. The initial lectures were conducted within the premises of the Kraton Palace, utilizing the available venues in Yogyakarta. At present, Universitas Gadjah Mada consists of 18 faculties, a graduate school, a vocational school, covering various study programs.

Prambanan

Constructed during the 9th century, this temple is the biggest religious complex honoring Shiva located in Indonesia. Atop the final ring of squares stand three temples adorned with exquisite stone carvings depicting the Indonesian adaptation of the Ramayana tale. These impressive reliefs showcase the revered Hindu gods - Shiva, Vishnu, and Brahma - and the animals devoted to them, forming masterpieces of sculptural art.

Ratu Boko

Ratu Boko is located on a hill, approximately 195.97 m above sea level, which is about 3 km towards the south of Prambanan. To be precise, Ratu Boko should be referred to as the remnants of a royal palace known as Keraton Ratu Boko instead of being categorized as a temple. During the 8th century, Buddhist Syailendra Dynasty built this palace. Later, the Hindu Mataram rulers assumed control of the place. The acquisition has resulted in Kraton Ratu Boko displaying a rich abundance of Hindu and Buddhist allusions.

Candi Ijo

Candi Ijo is situated in the Baturagung hills, positioned on the identical peak as Ratu Boko site. The construction of this temple complex is believed to have taken place in the 9th or 10th century, and it was uncovered in 1886. The complex of Candi Ijo comprises 11 stepped platforms, with the primary temple situated on the highest has a room containing diverse reliefs.

Candi Sambisari

By chance, a farmer stumbled upon Candi Sambisari in 1966, approximately 4 kilometers away from Prambanan. In 1986, the Yogyakarta Archaeological Center conducted an examination of the temple, following which it was subject to restoration. Compared to a multitude of Hindu temples in Java, the temple's architecture is quite unique: its base level is 6.5 meters lower than the surrounding ground level. The reason behind it is the catastrophic eruption of Mount Merapi in the early 11th century, which caused lava heaps.

Museum Ullen Sentalu

Source: <https://budaya.jogjaprov.go.id>

Ullen Sentalu represents the Javanese principle "Ulatiing Blencong Sejatining Tataraning Lumaku" which means 'light is the guide of life's path'. The museum, which was inaugurated in 1997, displays the culture and lives of the nobles of the Mataram dynasty. Visitors are treated to a wide array of noble statues, as well as various kinds of batik, including detailed explanations of the production process and the meaning of each pattern. The atmosphere of the museum has the power to immerse visitors in the fascinating era of ancient Javanese history.

Tebing Breksi

Prior to being recognized as a popular tourist destination, Tebing Breksi, or Breksi cliff, functioned as a site for mining natural rock minerals. In 2014, the government designated the area as a protected site due to the fact that the rocks found in this mining location stem from the volcanic activity. In 2015, Tebing Breksi was formally recognized as a destination. Numerous artists then have enhanced the cliff walls with their creativity, creating art carvings such as reliefs and statues inspired by Wayang tale

Hindia Ocean Beaches

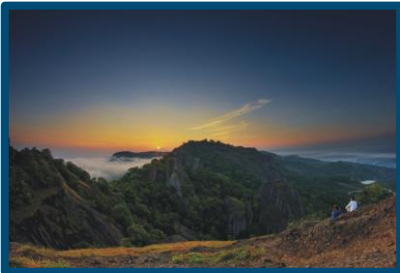

Being an archipelago country, Indonesia is widely known for its popular tourist destinations situated in its coastal regions such as the Province of Yogyakarta. The province's three districts have gained popularity owing to their captivating range of beach tourism options. Several black sand beaches are available for exploration in Bantul, including Parangtritis, Goa Cemara, and Samas beaches. In the Gunung Kidul District, there are stunning white sand beaches and breathtaking rock formations such as Wedi Ombo, Drini, Siung, and Pok Tunggal beaches. Additionally, Kulon Progo District features stunning beaches adorned with lagoons and pine trees, such as Glagah, Pasir Kadilangu, Bugel, and Congot beaches. Besides, numerous resorts have been constructed, offering breathtaking scenery.
